The “Boogaloo” Movement

ATF-Baltimore, in conjunction with the Baltimore Police Department, has observed social media postings on private social networking sites associated with the “Boogaloo” movement that mention violence against federal and local law enforcement officials. The “Boogaloo” movement consists of individuals that identify with extreme pro second amendment rights, believe a second civil war is imminent, and frequently speak of using violence to overthrow the government. In alignment with their second amendment views, members of this movement are likely to possess multiple types of weapons. It has been observed that some individuals associated with this group may wear clothing that mirrors military style apparel, which can also closely resemble that of a law enforcement uniform.

Individuals associated with, or in support of, the movement may possess a flag similar to the one above. Please note, the igloo and Hawaiian patterns, as seen above, are symbolic indicators associated with the “Boogaloo” movement.

CONTACT INFORMATION

Use caution if coming in contact with any individual(s) whom may identify with the “Boogaloo” movement. Should anyone have additional information regarding threats against law enforcement made by members of the group, please contact the ATF-Baltimore Crime Gun Intelligence Center (CGIC) [REDACTED] or the ATF JSOC at 800-800-3835 and ask for the Duty Agent closest to where the threat occurred.
